waring up some powerful writers.

A ciergyman in the cupels of the state house in decision, observing Captain W, at work on the utside of the dome, said to ham, "har, you are ow in a dangerous situation. I trust you have raide your peace with your heavenly Father. I never was at some with Hom," replied the galant captain.

such an hour, the clock would be striking while he was unloading; if he agreed to do a thing their heart was unloading; if he agreed to do a thing their was unloading; if he agreed to do at the same done, the same thous, was sufficient proof to all the neighbors round that he had agreed to do at this and thus,—such a weight of character had be attained. No "fearful foreholdings" ever influenced him to break or postpine on sengargement. Always punctual himself, he admired punctuality in those with whom he had to do; and when he dwalt with one not like unto himself in this particular, (and it is a thousand pities there are so many of that stamp among us.) they were pretty sure to get the joke upon themselves, if there were a joke in the matter; but let us cite an instance to the point.

Uncle fill called that expension or not we cannot say, but the truth was not in him if every thing was expressed, for Uncle Bill called that evening, and there was so much finishing to do that be could not have them till the succeeding the or the point.
